

Women's Health Clinic began with the vision of Manitoba women who saw the need for quality reproductive health care and dedicated time, effort and resources to establish a medical clinic run by and for women.

In 1973, a group of volunteers formed Pregnancy Information Service, Inc., a pro-choice birth control and pregnancy counselling service that operated through Klinik Community Health Centre. In response to a growing need for a wider range of health services and information for women, the Board developed a model for a community health clinic to provide uniquely woman-centred medical and counselling services, as well as education and advocacy on women's health issues.

Women's Health Clinic opened its doors on May 4, 1981 and within 2 years, secured core funding from the Province of Manitoba.

We have continually expanded over the years and today offer a broad range of health programs and support services to women of varying ages (and in specific services, to men and boys). WHC continues to evolve as we engage in reflective practice; reviewing and adapting our practices and policies to reflect current information in response to emerging women's health needs. Through our advocacy work, we think critically about health issues and inform healthy public policy, both provincially and nationally.

We are committed to developing welcoming and accessible programs and services for women who encounter obstacles in mainstream health care, including women from diverse ethno-cultural communities and equity groups, women living with disabilities and those with limited resources. We work closely with community members and groups, other service providers, organizations and governments to share our experience, expertise and information about women's health.

Throughout our history, many of our services were made possible through the commitment of time, energy and caring of our volunteers. Today, highly skilled and dedicated volunteers continue to play important roles at WHC - as peer counsellors about birth control and unplanned pregnancy options, mentors for mothering, community speakers and facilitators and as members of our elected Board of Directors.

Grounded in the strengths and accomplishments of our past WHC strides confidently into the future. Remaining true to our mission of "empowerment, choice and action", we encourage and support women in learning all they can about their health and well-being so they can make informed choices.
